Hearing the words, ‘you have cancer’ is overwhelming for most. While navigating a treatment plan is usually top of mind, patients of reproductive age may also have questions about what will happen with their fertility and if there are options to preserve their sperm or eggs before beginning treatment. It can all feel like too much, but fortunately, you are not alone.

The Duke Oncofertility Program is available to help individuals or couples explore and understand their options for building a family in the future. A partnership between the Duke Cancer Institute’s Supportive Care and Survivorship Center and the Duke Fertility Center, the Duke Oncofertility program gives patients and their loved ones access to a group of fertility experts, patient support providers, cancer doctors, nurses, financial counselors, lab specialists, and more, both before and throughout treatment.

A patient navigator will provide education around sexual health and fertility preservation. They will also connect you with a wide variety of psychosocial services based on your needs and assist you with maneuvering through any financial barriers to ensure fertility preservation is an available choice for you.

Melissa Norris, a sarcoma survivor, was especially touched by the comprehensive care and attention given by the team. She shared, “Our experience with the Duke Fertility Clinic was nothing short of exceptional. From our first experience with the front desk staff, to meeting with Dr. Acharya, you can feel the compassion and care they have for their patients. We cannot thank the staff, Kelly Acharya, MD and our Patient Navigator, Shannon Voelkel enough for their time, thoughtfulness, and the care they showed us.”

As the COVID-19 pandemic continues to evolve, it has become clear that we need to continue our efforts to minimize health and safety risks to Duke patients, staff, families, and the larger community.

Your psychosocial needs remain a top priority. We are continuing to offer the services listed on the following two pages remotely. For questions or to access these supportive care and survivorship services, please call 919.684.4497, email cancersupport@duke.edu, or ask your doctor or nurse. We are grateful for your continued cooperation and flexibility during this public health crisis.

Clinical Social Work
Oncology and palliative care social workers help patients and their loved ones cope with the emotional and practical concerns that accompany the diagnosis and treatment of cancer. Palliative Care
Duke’s palliative care experts help you find relief from the pain, symptoms and stress of serious illness. We’re here to help you gain emotional and psychological strength, and to ensure you and your loved ones experience the best possible quality of life. Although palliative care providers sometimes see people at the end of life, and we may talk with you about what hospice offers, we are not hospice care.
